

Can I Copy Your Homework?

- A Did you finish all your homework?
- B Sure. I always do my homework.
- A Great! Can I see it?
- B Why?
- A So I can copy it.
- B No!
- A Don't worry. I'll change it a little.
- B What do you mean?
- A You won't get in trouble. I'll change it so nobody will know I copied it.
- B But I'll know you copied it.
- A So? Who cares? You're my friend.
- B Uh-huh. Friends don't ask friends to cheat.
- A Yeah, right! Grow up!
- B I am grown up.
- A Doesn't look like it.
- B I did my homework too. I did my own homework. Like a grown-up! You should try it sometime!
- A You are being so rude today.
- B A lot of grown-ups are rude.

What Do You Like To Read?

- A What did you get for your birthday?
- B A brand new book!
- A That kinda stinks.
- B It's kinda great. I love to read.
- A Not me. I think books are boring.
- B Well, it all depends. What kind of books do you have?
- A I have all kinds of story books and kids' books.
- B With pictures?
- A Of course with pictures.
- B That's the problem right there.
- A Why?
- B Your books are too baby-fied. They're too easy for you.
- A You think so?
- B Definitely. You need big, thick books to read and study. Like grown-ups get. Look for something with a table of contents. No pictures.
- A Well ... I guess that would make it more of a challenge.
- B Yeah, you'd get a lot more good information in an adult book. Let's go to the library and I'll help you find one. What kind of a book would you be interested in?
- A Do they have any with puffy stickers?
